Author Akutra-Ramses Atenosis Cea brings a story that would keep readers on their toes and keep their minds thinking in his highly-rated science fiction book, "Spidersilk."

The story revolves around Mark Kheops, a tech-savvy video game developer who has a secret ability to link to entangled worlds. Mark is on a mission to foil the plans of abducting intruders while examining other worlds.

In Spidersilk, Akutra was able to weave a schematic logic that takes a dive into the fringes of reality in ways that are within the realm of possibility.

In a review, Grady Harp loved how Washington State author Akutra-Ramses Atenosis Cea's novel Spidersilk includes fringe sciences mixed with modern technology.

"Though there is little information about his background, this debut novel places him in the ascendency as a science fiction novelist of note. Few writers have been able to incorporate the growing obsession with video games and AI with the skill of Akutra Ramses. "The concept of the interactive video game story is quickly becoming the popular entertainment and will continue to do so since we are only in the beginning stages of development," Harp wrote in a review.

On the other hand, Phil Bolos, another reader, commended how Spidersilk took readers into new worlds and new where anything seems possible, and any dream or nightmare could come around the corner at any time.

"I really enjoyed the idea of this story and the way the events unfolded. Mark is a highly talented video game designer who has a secret. He has a connection that allows him to travel to other worlds and hunt down intruders who are up to no good. Helping him along the way is an army of spiders that he can control while he is doing his interdimensional job," writes Phil.

Julius Z., meanwhile, said at first, readers would wonder what in the world they are getting into. However, after they catch the idea of what is taking place, they would not be able to put the book down.

"To define one genre and stick it to this book is impossible. There are so many elements blended and intertwined that just need to get along with the flow of things. You will be presented with so many dimensions and changes through our known reality and the world of dreams. As the story moves forward, there will be moments where you will ask yourself which world is the one you're traveling at the moment, as reality is distorted and twisted the more you read and dreams seems safer," Julius wrote.

Akutra Ramses grew up exploring the world with no permanent residence. Akutra immersed himself in various journeys globally, where he experienced many cultures.

Upon his return to the USA, Akutra's became a software developer, ultimately obtaining multiple college degrees, including a master's in Technology Leadership.
